

Jerry O'Connell Is Also Sorry, Books Art Space Next to Shia LaBeouf

3:47 PM PST 02/12/2014 by Erik Hayden

Facebook 10 | Twitter 41 | LinkedIn 1 | Email | Print | Comments

Jerry O'Connell

Eric Charbonneau/Invision/AP

There will be a Funny or Die video associated with the art project.

Shia LaBeouf's apology-driven performance art piece is getting its own parody -- very close by.

RECOMMENDED:

Shia LaBeouf Launches Bizarre Public Performance Art Piece »

Comedy Central Lawyers Approve 'Dumb Starbucks' Stunt »

Funny or Die CEO Explains Business Model: 'Be Nothing Like Kevin Costner' »

Actor Jerry O'Connell opened up his own pop-up art show on Beverly Boulevard at Artspace Warehouse that riffs on the Transformers actor's #IAmSorry piece. Titled #IAmSorryToo, the project is affiliated with Funny or Die, the actor's publicist Nicki Fioravante told THR.

EARLIER: A Visit to Shia LaBeouf's Public Performance Art Piece

By 3:40 p.m., O'Connell had finished his performance, said Artspace Warehouse employee Maggie Devers, who added that the piece was a one-day-only event. A Funny or Die rep said that there would be a video component to the stunt.

LaBeouf's #IAmSorry performance art piece followed his appearance on the Berlin Film Festival red carpet for the premiere of Lars von Trier's Nymphomaniac wearing a paper bag on his head emblazoned with the words "I Am Not Famous Anymore."

THR visited LaBeouf's gallery project on Tuesday, finding the actor seated silently at a wooden table with what appeared to be the same paper bag over his head.

Funny Or Die @funnyordie
BREAKING: Jerry O'Connell has an art exhibit directly next to Shia LaBeouf's. 7358 Beverly. Today only. #IAmSorryToo
2:08 PM - 12 Feb 2014
203 RETWEETS 209 FAVORITES